The information in the tables is illustrated in the attached charts.

Table 1 shows the number of driving offences committed by participants prior to attending the Right Track Programme. At the top, 35 participants had no prior driving offending. Right Track has at times been funded for "at risk" youth. At the bottom of the table we have one offender who had committed 25 driving offences prior to the Right Track. Only 24% of the participants had never committed a driving offence prior to the programme.

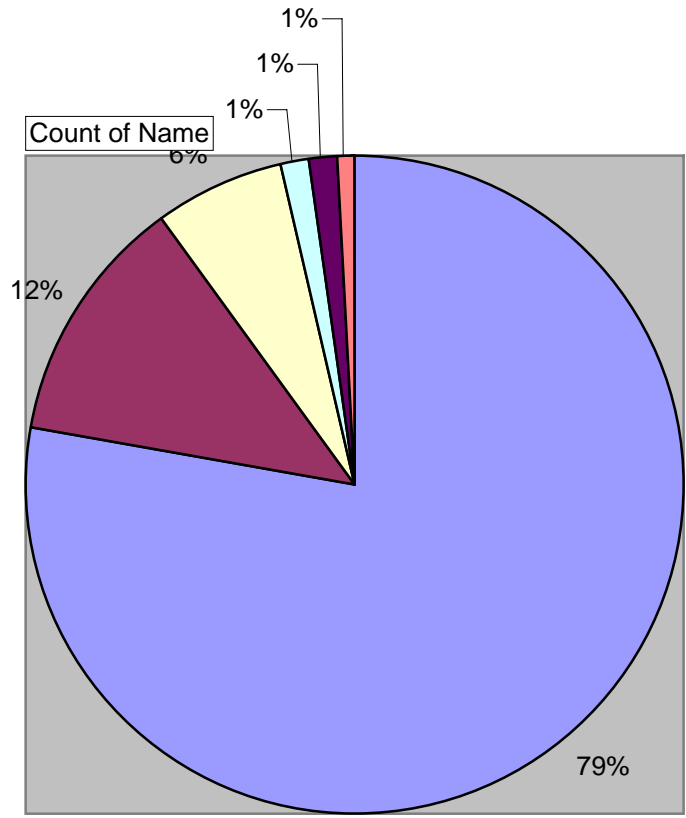

Table 2 shows how many driving offences were committed by participants within the first year after completing Right Track. At the top, 108 participants had committed no more offending, that is 79% of participants committed no more driving offending after the Right Track, and a further 12% committed only 1 driving offence. At the bottom 1 participant went on to commit 6 offences, that was only 1% of all the participants.

Table 3 shows how many driving offences have been committed by participants a full year after they completed their Right Track programme. 101 participants completed their Right Track programme more than a year ago. 74% of all those participants have not committed any driving offences more than a year later, and in some cases more than 3 years on, showing Right Track has a sustained effect.

The information in the tables is illustrated in the attached Crime Charts.

Table 1 shows the number of criminal offences committed by participants prior to attending the Right Track Programme. At the top, 48 participants had no prior offending. Right Track has at times been funded for "at risk" youth. At the bottom of the table we have one offender who had committed 55 criminal offences prior to Right Track. Only 35% of Right Track participants had not committed any criminal offences prior to the programme.

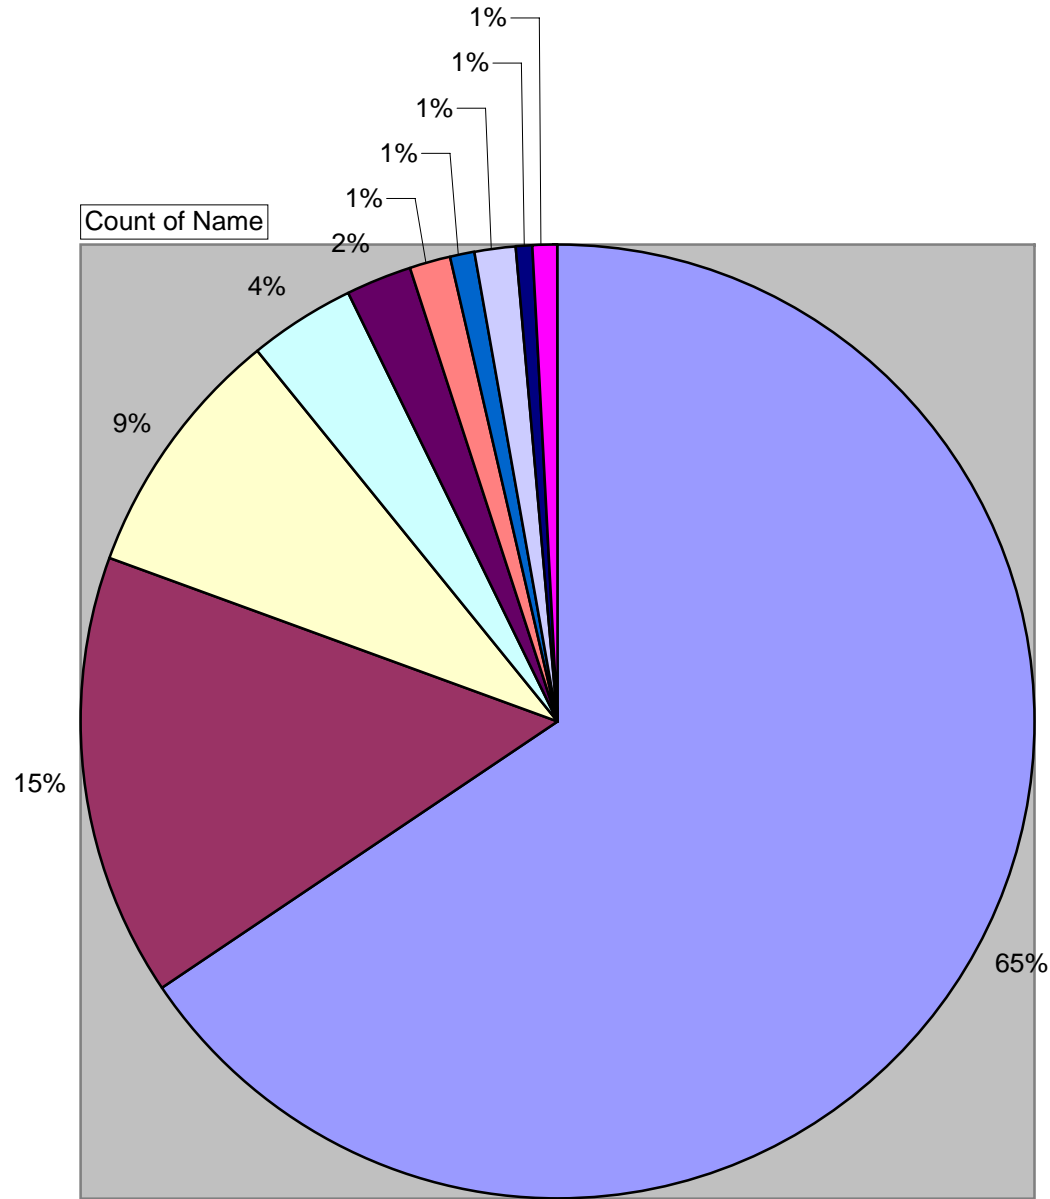

Table 2 shows how many criminal offences were committed by participants within the first year after completing Right Track. At the top, 91 participants had committed no more offending, that is 65% of participants committed no more criminal offending after the Right Track, and a further 15% committed only 1 criminal offence. At the bottom 1 participant went on to commit 11 offences, that was only 1% of all the participants.

Table 3 shows how many criminal offences have been committed by participants a full year after they completed their Right Track programme. 101 participants completed their Right Track programme more than a year ago. 69% of all those participants have not committed any criminal offences more than a year, and in some cases more than 3 years on, showing Right Track has a sustained effect.
